

Global Distribution of Birth Rates

In 2008, most countries had birth rates less than 25 live births per 1,000 population. There are, however, many developing countries where women tend to bear more children.

